PAREWELL, NOBLE PELLOW! HENRY W. GRADY, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, finished in the gray dawn of to-day a life too fine to be so brief. Yet he lived long enough to secure what would be worthy fruit for twice his years. Mr. Gnany was in the full vigor of his splendid prime when Doath came, for he was only thirty-eight. For ten years he has been known throughout the country. He was a New Southerner, with as fine fibre as ever went into the make-up of a man of that chivalric section.

He was earnest, patriotic, broad, pure energetic and strong. No wonder that Atlanta congregations yesterday knew no better for the Lord's Day than ti at of praying Heaven to spare them the life of this young nobleman, their truest friend. For himself, he lived long enough to win glory and to leave a name he had made famous, but the country could ill afford to spare him.

"If I die, I die serving the South, the land I love so well," he said. May Southern soil rest lightly on his Cancer of the Nose.

In 1875 a sore appeared on my nose and gree rapidly. As my father had cancer and my husband dels of it, I became alarmed and consulted my physician. His treatment did no good, and the sore gree larger and worse in every way until I had concluded that I was to die rom it seffects. I was persuaded to take S. S. S., and a few bottles cured me. This was atter all the doctors and other medicines had failed. I have had no return of the cancer.
